The Cause of the Accident to the City of Paris Still Unexplained by the Experts.

SHE WASSTRONG AND SEAWORTHY,

In the Opinion of Engineers and Inspectors Who Examined the Ship Carefully.

MARY ANDERSON QUIETLY WEDDED.

Lord Sackville's Daughter Marries a Consin and Heir to Big Estates.

[BY DUNLAP'S CABLE COMPANY.] LIVERPOOL, June 17 .- The Board of Inquiry into the accident to the City of Paris, met again at 11 o'clock this morning. The first witness was James Thomson, the builder of the vessel, who gave full details of the construction of its several parts. He said that the City of Paris was built to meet the requirements of an armed cruiser. She had 14 transverse bulkheads each extending to the upper deck. The cast steel used was tested in the presence of the officers of the Board of Trade and the Lloyds. The tests averaged 30 tons to the square inch. This is the first time that steel has been so largely used in time that steel has been so largely used in the engines of a merchant vessel, though at Knole Park, Seven Oaks, Kent, the resivery common in the navy. The City of Paris was constructed so as to be available as a swift cruiser for government use in case of war, but safety was not sacrificed to speed. Many things were done to make the ship safer than ordinary vessels.

GREAT ATTENTION TO SAFETY. Her bulkheads were stronger and more numerous than required by Lloyd's. Her double bottom was very strongly constructed the sides. The bulkhead at the forward end even if it had given way the next bulkhead forward was still stronger and the ship would only have got 600 tons more water in her and would have still had free board enough. James Mollison, Lloyd's engineer and surveyor at Glasgow, described the tests the engines had been subjected to, and said that they had satisfied him that the work was ex-

Mr. Mollison considered that the accident was caused through the lignum vite being worn out of the bushing, but he could form no opinion how that occurred. He thought the wearing down of the bushing preceded the breaking of the shaft, and that preceded the breaking of the engine. The liner on the tail of the shaft was originally 1½ inch thick; the broken pieces of it that remain are of various thicknesses and greatly worn. To fracture this lining would destroy the lignum vitre, and then the two metals, coming together, would destroy each other and the strain coming on the shaft would be enormous and of a character to break it. CAREFUL TESTS MADE.

Mr. Courtier Dutton, Lloyds' registrar for Holl, said that he had inspected the vessel during construction, and had made careful tests of the material used, which, together with the work, was of the first quality, and everything had been done to insure safety, with no attempt to sacrifice that quality to speed. James Stewart, surveyor to the Board of Trade at Glasgow, being called as a witness, verified Mr. Dutton's evidence and added that he knew of no governor that would stop or control engines when freed under conditions, and that he was thoroughly satisfied of the strength of

Mr. William Heron, principal engineer at Laird Brothers', gave similar evidence, and Mr. Thomson, surveyor to the Board of Trade at Liverpool, spoke in the same strain, saying that he was satisfied that the City of Paris was thoroughly seaworthy. Mr. James Ramsay, surveyor to the Board of Trade, John Wells, chief engineer, and John Gill, third engineer, all praised the ship and the engines. The inquiry was then adjourned till to-morrow.

A CHAPEL PILLAGED

IN THE ATTEMPT TO SECURE MEMENTOES OF A NOTABLE EVENT.

The Marriage of Mary Anderson and Joseph De Nevarro is Followed by Unseemly Scenes-Only 17 People Witness the BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.

LONDON, June 17 .- [Copyright] .- In the tiny little Catholic chapel of St. Mary, on the summit of Holly Hill, in the remote suburb of Humpstead, Mary Anderson was this morning married to Autonio Fernando de Nevarro, the eldest son of Jose F. de Nevarro, of New York. There were 17 people present at the wedding, including the priest, eight acolytes, and the bride and groom. The others were the two half sisters of the bride, Juliet and Blanche Griffin, her stepfather, Dr. Hamilton Griffin, and her brother, Joseph Anderson, and his wife. The chapel of St. Mary is not much larger than an American freight car, and is far out of the line of ordinary travel, and even the cab drivers had to make many inquiries before finding the place. Add to this that it had been raining all night, that the road was an inch deep in mud, and that a chilling mist was drizzling down all day, and it is hard to believe that some 400 or 500 people, mostly women, many o them undoubtedly of the wealthier classes, should gather outside of the chapel before 11 o clock, the hour an-nounced for the ceremony, and wait in the cold for an hour or more to catch sight of the beautiful bride.

Five minutes before the hour a handsom cab toiled up Holly Hill. In it were the groom and his brother, Alienso de Navarro, who arrived from New York on Monday morning to act as best man. They entered through the priest's house, which stood flush with the chapel, and a moment later two carriages arrived on the crest of the hill No sooner did the bridal party alight than the door swung open and instantly closed so soon as they were inside. In vain did well-dressed and rain-souked women plead for admission; in vain did they besiege the door of the priest's house, and look for windows where a glimpse of the ceremony might be obtained. They neither saw nor heard anything until half an hour later, when the doors opened again and the bridal party came forth. That was the end of it. De Navarro took a seat with his bride in the carriage that had brought her thither, and all were off to Dr. Griffio's house, where the wedding breakfast was waiting.

The bride was dressed in a Paris gown of heavy white satin, covered with embroidered tisse. The waist was high at the neck, with large sleeves. She wore a tulle veil, but no jewels, and carried a bouquet of orange blossoms and lilies of the valley. The maid of hears wore like with the valley. of honor wore white mulle and a large white hat and carried pink roses. The ceremony hat and carried pink roses. The ceremony was performed by Canon Purcell, the pastor of St. Mary's chapel, who has long been Miss Anderson's confessor, and for whom she entertains a most devout regard. After the bridal party had left the chapel the crowd that had remained outside descended upon it. They divested it of the beautiful white flowers with which it had been decorated. They stole the prayer books and leaflets, and even cast depredatory eyes upon the holy water; and would have carried off the marriage register in fragments if Canon Purcell had not fled with it into his house.

The reason announced for the extremprivacy of the wedding was that the groom was in mourning for his uncle, Francis Dykers, of New York, whose death occurred a mouth ago. The real reason doubtless was, however, Miss Anderson's morbid dread of a crowd. Mr. and Mrs. de Navarro left by the club train this alternoon for Dover. They intend to cross the channel in the morning and go on to Venice, where the groom's mother is, and where the honeynoon will be spent.

SACKVILLE'S DAUGHTER MARRIED.

She Weds Her Cousin, the Heir to the Family Estates at Seven Oaks. LONDON, June 18 .- The marriage between Lionel Sackville West and his cousin, Miss Victoria Sackville West, eldest daughter of Lord Sackville, late British

The bridegroom is heir to the family estates at Seven Oaks.

SHUT THE ENTIRE PLANT DOWN. Strike at Carnegie, Phipps & Co.'s Steel

Mills at Benver Falls. PRINCIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. BEAVER FALLS, June 17 .- The extensive steel mills of Carnegie, Phipps & Co., with web frames throughout to strengthen at this place, are now idle, owing to a strike among the Hungarians employed in the rod of the engine room stood without any sign mill. The men were getting $1 50 per day, of straining, allowing no water to pass, but but did not think it sufficient for the amount of the work to be done this hot weather. They struck yesterday afternoon for an advance and were promptly discharged. The vard men were brought in, but they refused to fill the places of the Huns, so got their walking papers also.

This morning bundlers could not be got sufficient to do the work at the rod mill and it did not run. Superintendent Dillon entrying to get others these men put on their coats and quit work. This action made him so angry that he shut the entire plant down and would not even allow the men at the 10-inch, the 12-inch and 18-inch merchant mills to roll out their heats, but had the charges in the furnaces withdrawn. It is said that Mr. Dillon stated to the men that as soon as he could get bundlers for the rod mill he would put the wheels in motion

THE ARRANGEMENTS EXCELLENT.

Preparations for the Sunday School Convention Progressing Favorably. The Entertainment Committee of the Inter-national Sunday School Convention, to be held here next week, met yesterday afternoon. The arrangements for the convention were found to be excellent. The only point not quite covered was the means of housing 1,200 of the delegates. However, circulars will be sent out to all prominent church members, asking for accommodation for the visitors. Seats for 680 commodation for the visitors. Seats for 680 persons will be placed in the cafe, and 350 more under canvas awnings at the Exposition building and grounds. No one except delegates will be admitted to the cafe and tents without a special cafe badge, obtainable from Mis. L. J. Lorder, 138 Third awnue. A number of good things have been donated to the cafe by different dealers in Pittsburg. There, was not enough money to purchase sufficient ice cream, but several U.
